

Little boys shouldn't have to face the battle of their lifetime before the age five, but sadly many do. For little Carter Craig his battle is starting before the age of 5, as he started to have seizures and doctors found a tumor on his brainstem.

Doctor's still do not know what type of tumor it is, but Carter will be going every 8-10 weeks for MRI's to keep a close eye on the growth. There is no cure, but there are treatments once Carter gets a little older. Carter continues to live life to its fullest and continues to be a brave cowboy!
